(54) Title: INNOVATIVE PRESTRESSED SCAFFOLDING SYSTEM

(57) Abstract: Disclosed herein is a support system that is temporarily placed below ground for preventing collapse of the excavated ground when a subway is constructed or a basement of a building is built. The excavated ground or load is supported by means of supporting members, the supporting members being pre-stressed by means of tensioning members and tendon support members serving to support the tensioning members. Consequently, the number of struts for supporting vertical piles and wales is considerably reduced so that obstacles in the underground space when it is excavated are removed. Furthermore, the constructional efficiency of the underground space is greatly improved, and the cost of construction is sharply reduced.
